

Editorial Article

The “Iranian Journal of Materials Forming (IJMF)” is an international, open-access journal dedicated to the study of material deformation and forming processes. Established in 2014 at Shiraz University, IJMF welcomes submissions from scientists and engineers across both academic and industrial sectors, encompassing all aspects of manufacturing processes. The journal covers a wide range of topics related to material deformation, including elastic and plastic behaviors, as well as deformations resulting from material failure. Its quality and credibility are ensured by a distinguished editorial board, which includes some of the world’s leading experts in the field. In addition, the journal’s rigorous peer-review process is supported by a diverse group of highly qualified referees. We are proud to announce that IJMF has now completed its fifth consecutive year of successful quarterly publication, with the second issue of 2025 already released.
